circumstances. Further, that it is to be a matter of free-will offering, not of restraint, for this only is acceptable to God. This certainly clears the atmosphere as to Christian giving, and makes it free and farreaching. If there be not a liberal soul behind the giving, then all gifts will be meager and stingy, and the blessings of heaven will be withheld. "There is that scattereth and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet and it tendeth to poverty." Again, we are told that the "liberal soul will be made fat." Then there is the promise of Old Testament prophecy: "Bring ye all the tithes into the treasure-house that there may be meat in my house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of beaven and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

SYSTEM—The third scripture announces the way in which this law is to be systematically applied: "Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." This fixes a certain time when Christ's disciples are to set apart for his use a certain percentage of their income, and also deposit with the church, which is his representative and the custodian for the distribution of all gifts. "The first day of the week," or the Lord's day, is designated as a suitable time, and all measure of the gift is "as God hath prospered." No prosperity, no gift. Little prosperity, little gift. Great prosperity, great gift. And so the apostle makes it a matter of conscience, "as he purposeth in his heart." Thus this law in its application sweeps the whole horizon of the Christian life, and is to be applied concientiously, systematically, liberally.

As a closing thought, we would call attention to the necessity of personal consecration first of all. The Macedonian Christians first gave themselves to the Lord, then to his service. This is the natural order, and the only order that will foster the grace of
